

That's the Ticket!

This thief worked at a theatre. As you can see, her job was to sell tickets to moviegoers. Watch carefully as she keeps track of what to steal by marking her hand with a pen. The movie ticket has two parts to it. The first part is the main ticket, and the second part is the "stub" that looks the same as the ticket, only a different color. What she is doing is selling a ticket for full price and then selling the stub of that ticket also at full price to the next customer. The primary ticket is recorded properly, however the money that the next customer in line uses to pay for their ticket is not recorded because he or she is being issued the stub from the ticket that was just purchased by the customer in front of them.

It is the money from the sale of the ticket stubs that she keeps track of by making slash marks on a piece of paper near the register, or by making slash marks on her hand as can be seen in the video clip.

In the early part of the clip, you can see three young ladies enter and she issues one of them a stub. One of the young ladies returns to question the employee about it and then continues into the theatre. At the same time, you can see the employee look out to see if management is anywhere nearby.

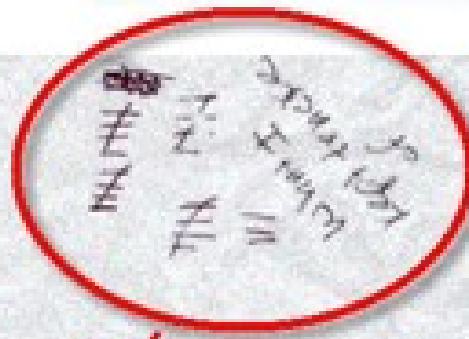

In the last 9 months, I've stolen between 6 or 7 thousand dollars ($6,000-$7,000); with the most being within the last 3 months. I would ring up a ticket to a customer at full price then they would get the white copy. Then I would take the pink copy (stub) & sell it to the next customer. I would then take the money from the sale of the pink copy. I ~~used~~ kept track several ways; mentally; tally marks on paper ~~or sometimes~~ or my hand or bringing up the report of how many tickets sold & then figuring out what's left over to take. The most I stole in one day would be $300. The last time I stole was today & it ~~came to~~ came to $195. I have returned this money to Mr. Urban

$50 bill
6 $20 bill
1 $10 bill
3 $5 bill.

~~Account~~ Sometimes I would take the money up front + put it in my pocket or purse or I would take it on the way back to the office. The reasons why I took the money was because my grandmothers social security got cut. To not worry her since I handle her finances I would pay for the medication, doctor bills or house bills that I knew she couldn't cover. I would put money in her account or go pay the bill myself so she would thank that she was covered. For example I could spend up to $200 on medicine in a week. Over the past 3 1/2 yrs. I would say I've let in about 50-100 people. Without charging them to see a movie. This being a $500 lost. I feel that what I've done was wrong. I also know that I can be prosecuted for what I've done. I was told I will receive a copy of my statement.
